Baptist Entertainment.
The Baptist church and Sunday school presented a most unique entertainment at their church parlors last evening. The title of the production given is Santa Claus and Company, and the form of the entertainment was a humorous opera. The tinsel fairies were the most pleasing part of the entire company. Their drills were widely applauded. The program was started at seven-thirty, and lasted for Cargill M. E. Church Program.

The Methodist Sunday school and young people's choir gave an interesting program for their Christmas exercises at the church reception rooms last evening. The annual treat from the Sunday school consisting of a package of candy and an orange, was distributed to each member present.

Every class from the Sunday school contributed something in the line of eatables or money for the poor of this city. The value of the products collected together with the money obtained, reached the one hundred dollar mark. These goods will be sold to the poor of the city, under the direction of Miss Pratt, the church deaconess.

The program rendered was very good, and was as follows:
Song—"Joy to the World," by the Sunday school.
Recitation—"Awake Before Christmas," Lois Atkinson.
Song—"Birthdays of King," Young People's choir.
Recitation—"Watchful Small Boy," Earl Atkinson.
Recitation—"A Christmas Worry," Andy Manross.
Song—"Silent Night, Silent Night," Invisible choir.
Recitation—"A Cross-examination," Clara May Tarrant.
Song—"To Victory," Young People's choir.

Recitation—"A Christmas Thought," Gladys Murphy.
Song by Sunday school, "Oh, Little Town of Bethlehem."

Midnight Mass will be celebrated by Dean E. E. Reiley with sermon in keeping with the first Mass of one of the greatest feasts of the church. The choir, assisted by Prof. Gibbs with violin, and J. P. Smith with cornet, will render J. W. Bartholomew's Mass in E-flat. The regular choir will be assisted by Leonard Mathews, who will sing the two solos. X-mas solos, Adele Fideles by the full choir.

The Children's Mass at 8:00 a. m. on Christmas morning will be celebrated by Rev. William Mahoney. His sermon will be in keeping with the second Mass of this day. The music, under the direction of the Sisters of Mercy, will be sung by the young ladies of the juvenile choir.

The Sisters have taken great interest in preparing this music, and their efforts will be appreciated by the St. Patrick's congregation.

The third Mass will be at 10:30 a. m., and celebrated also by Rev. William Mahoney. His sermon will be in keeping with the third Mass of this feast, as it is the only day in the year that three Masses can be said by any one priest. TWO OFFENDERS DRAW
TEN DAY SENTENCES

James Hampton, arraigned in Judge Maxfield's court on the charge of drunkenness, this morning drew a fine of $10 or ten days, grim necessity resulting in his choice of the latter alternative. George Hessebauer pleaded guilty to a similar offense and was given ten days that by Judge Maxfield, who explained that he would arrange to have Hessebauer work out his sentence under the custody of his father.

FEW PERSONS PAY TAXES
DAY BEFORE CHRISTMAS
RUSH BEGINS IN A WEEK

Janesville citizens are too busy with Christmas preparations to bother about taxes which they figure can be paid just as well after the holidays as at present. There were very few who cared to make the city a Christmas gift in the shape of a tax settlement today, and the two previous days of the week have been light in this particular, according to City Treasurer George Muenchow. The rush will begin after Christmas or about the first of the year. Tax receipts up to this time have kept pace with last year's record, however, and a fair sized percentage of the total amount has been collected.

Buy it in Janesville, where the merchants always keep abreast of the times.

We rely on it for croup, coughs and colds." So can you. 50c and $1.00. A bottle should be in every home. At all Drugists. H. E. Bucklen & Co. Phila., St. Louis.

WATCH US GROW.

GINK AND DINK—DINK ALMOST STRUCK IT RIGHT.

Sport Snap Shots

From Philadelphia comes word that something new in the way of a knockout has recently been brought to light there. At different times the Sports City has offered some queer ones in this line, but here surely is the warmest one yet. It seems—so the story goes—that two heavy boys were having a mill at Jack McQuigan's gym. Ed Smith, a husky rascal, was to oppose a large sailor person named Nick Crane. Right away in the first round after the handshake Smith leaped back to take a real vigorous knock at Crane with a deal of steam behind it. He missed, however, and so great was the force of his blow that it carried him off his feet, precipitating him on his head directly behind the ear and rendered him unconscious. The floor wins with a K. O.

The smooth shaven features of Mr. Jim Johnstone and Mr. Brick Owens, umpires, are radiant with smiles. Both gents are highly elated over the dismissal of John Lynch as president of the league and they make no effort to suppress their glee. It seems that they both feel that Lynch never treated them as equals and squarely as he might have and last winter Johnstone declared that if Lynch was re-elected he would quit his job. Which he did when Lynch was elected for another term. Johnstone joined the A. A. where he made many friends. Owens was canned from the National league umpire squad in the middle of the 1912 season to be surprised of one and all. Just what the trouble was between Lynch and Owens never appeared, as Owens strangely enough refused to talk the matter over with the press. Lynch is quoted as saying that Owens had been guilty of behavior unbecoming an umpire and that's all there was to it. However, when the news came of Lynch's removal, Owens, who winters in Kansas City, took pains to express his delight. It seems to be the general opinion that Owens' umpiring was well up to the scratch and that he was released only because of some little personal difference with Lynch. It isn't at all unlikely that he will have another chance at umpiring in National league circles under Tener's regime.

Jess Willard isn't altogether a boob at the game, thinks old Jim Corbett. Jim is willing to admit that Carl Morris is just about in the ash barrel, but he can't help but feel that there is still a little hope for Willard. Jess knows a great deal more about the game than Carl Morris and a great deal more than the average observer would believe. The main difficulty with the big hope seems to be that he is never able to arouse a very lively interest in the fight business and goes at it in a rather apathetic manner. Occasionally when he uncovers a regular punch he shows real class, but that's only occasionally. Jim Corbett feels sure that if Manager Tom Jones could only inject a little more pep and fighting spirit into his large friend he would have a fighter able to knock wisdom teeth down the throat of any adversary.

Considerable "one distance" singing was done in the American Association last season from a glance at the averages recently printed. Rigger of St. Paul lead the league in this regard having made twelve home runs and 22 triples which stands as a record. Rigger's unusual activity with his bat helped a great deal in putting St. Paul ahead of all the other clubs at the bat. Larry Chappell of Milwaukee was second in the season with the White Sox was the real leader of the league at bat having piled up an average of .349 in 85 games. Ruff of Indianapolis was second with .337 for 156 games and also came in second in the stolen base column with 47 following Niehoff of Louisville who managed to get away with 48.

EXPECT HARD FIGHT WITH BELOIT FIVE

Janesville Cardinals Hope for Victory Against Iroquois Club on Christmas Night.

The Janesville Cardinals will have no easy time to down the Beloit Iroquois club who are to meet the Janesville basketball five tomorrow night as the Beloit squad is stronger than at first expected, having several fast college players in the line-up. Ed and Tom Garrity, whose athletic prowess is well known to local basketball and football followers are named on the team with several of Beloit's old high school stars who are on the college squad.

While the Janesville team holds no fear of the Beloit men, having two of the fastest forwards in this section of the state in their fold, and the rest of the team composed of crack men, they have great respect for the Beloit men's ability at the game and expect to be forced to fight their hardest to trim the Christmas visitors.

Beloit's strength is shown by their line-up which probably will be as follows: Prendle, c; Ed Garrity and Korst, forwards; Willford and T. Garrity, guards.

Janesville's lineup: Edler, c; Maurice and Cunningham, forwards; Edwards and Falter, guards.

Harlem Tommy Murphy is the only real veteran in the ring today. He was fighting when Joe Gans was champion, and he saw Bat Nelson and Ad Wolgast win and lose the title. He was fighting when Young Corbett, Jimmy Britt, Eddie Hanlon, Benny Yanger and scores of other great fighters were in their prime. Yet during all these years he never has had the opportunity to fight for the lightweight title. He is the champion hard-luck pug.

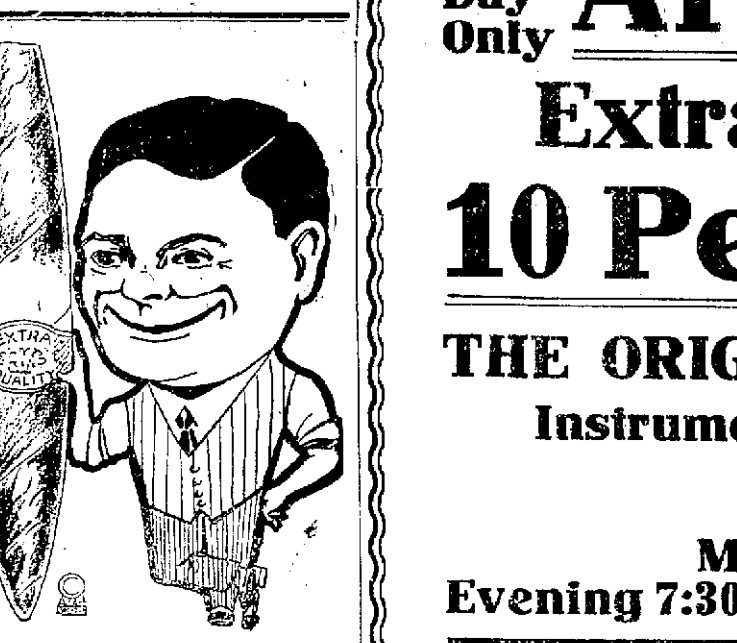

Critics, Take Notice. Great writers cantingly criticised by small writers—of whom Dr. Parr might be happy to say, that they have profanity without obscenity—perspicuity without prolixity—ornament without glare—terseness without barrenness—penetration without subtlety—comprehensiveness without digression—and a great number of other things without a great number of other things.—Sydney Smith.

MERRY CHRISTMAS.

The Merry Christmas greeting never grows old, and the grandmothers of today, who were the girls of long ago, enjoy the old-time Christmas morning salutation as much as do the children who are more interested in what the day has brought them.

A man stood at an office desk this morning, and said: "I'm going home to spend Christmas with my mother. Last year some of the children disappointed her but tomorrow we will all be together for a family reunion."

This family "getting together" is one of the charms of the Christmas holiday, and all over the land the boys and girls, with a liberal sprinkling of grandchildren, are speeding across the country to make glad the hearts of fathers and mothers, in the old home.

It's worth something to have a home of this kind to go to for the memory of childhood associations is a sacred memory, and living over the old days, in the old-fashioned home, is always a choice privilege.

The day of good cheer is never a day of universal happiness, because there are always sad and lonely hearts, to whom the joy of others seems more or less of a travesty.

The visit of the silent messenger knows neither time nor place and the glad holiday, in some homes, is a day of mourning.

Then, too, there are a few old and lonely pilgrims, living out beyond their generation, on the edge of time, who find it difficult to enter into the Christmas spirit, unless some kindly heart turns aside to break up the monotony of lonely existence.

Life is supposed to be at its best at Christmas time, because the spirit of human selfishness, is lost to large extent in human service. Santa Claus is a welcome visitor in every home, and never regarded as an intruder.

The most sensitive heart responds to the touch of the Master's helpers, at the holiday season, and the blessedness of giving always rivals the happiness of receiving.

GOOD OLD ST. NICK.

Of course there is a St. Nicholas. In childhood we call him Santa Claus. It is just an endearing name for the patron saint who has come down through ages. We believe him as children, we believe in him more firmly when we have children of our own. It is a belief that has come down through the ages to us as a heritage of the past. A wonderful story, Charles Johnson, in the current issue of the "Outlook" magazine, tells of St. Nicholas, the real St. Nicholas, that makes an interesting little tale just at this particular period of the year. A story that bears repeating again and again.

The god saint was a Greek, born about A. D. 260 at Patara, on the coast of Lycia in the southwest corner of Asia Minor. Marvelous tales are told of his early piety, his fiery courage, his devotion to the right and his love for children and the unfortunate.

He was ordained a priest by his uncle, Bishop Nicholas of Patara, and later became himself archbishop of the important diocese of Myra, the most important city of Lycia. His selection as archbishop is a tale which offers a good illustration both of his humility and of the stories current about him in his time.

He wished to work where he was not even known by name, so left Patara for Myra, where he had not a single friend. Just as he was nearing the city an election was being held for a successor to Archbishop John of Myra, who had just died. The bishops of Lycia gathered, but were unable to agree. They determined, therefore, to leave the selection to the Lord and prayer that he might make known to them His choice.

As the eldest of the bishops slept there came to him a vision saying that the first person to visit the cathedral in the morning following, one who would be named Nicholas, should be chosen, and St. Nicholas, arriving in Myra that morning and at once repairing to the cathedral, was thus named.

His abundant and quiet charity aided in making a name for him among the people of Greece, and in Grecian pictures he is often represented as carrying a purse for the relief of the needy. He also became a patron saint among sailors because of his reputed ability to quiet storms at sea.

The date of his death was Dec. 6, and this was long observed in the East as the "children's day," the story being that he would then reward all good children and punish those who were bad, disobedient or lazy.

Mr. Johnson shows that no other saint is so generally popular. When Vladimir of Russia came to Constantinople in the sixth century to be baptized he carried back to his own land with him the story of "Nicholas the Wonder-worker," and this was amplified all through the North.

The Greek name "Nikolaos" became Sankt Nikolaus to the Germans, abbreviated to "Sankt Claus," or, as we call him, "Santa Claus." He is loved in both Catholic and Protestant countries alike, churches dedicated to him being scattered all over Christendom.

Even the Mohammedans revere him, while he is also the patron saint of the Laplanders and Samoyeds and the North Siberian peoples who are not Christians. All sailors in the Mediterranean regard him as their patron, and his principal attributes, symbolizing human traits universally loved—kindliness, courage and generosity—have not only endeared him to all children but to men and women everywhere.

This is the Christmas time and the period for merry making and happiness the world over. It is the time for family reunions, general mirth and the yule log and the sports of the Lord of Misrule. Let all be happy.

Those who contributed in making tomorrow a happy, memorable day for the little people of Janesville can feel assured that their self-denial and efforts were not in vain.

Senator Oliver's 6,650 pounds of complimentary buckwheat flour ought to help a little in official Washington's struggle to live on its salary.

A St. Paul minister has come out in defense of Ananias. But probably he wouldn't have done it if Ananias had lived in Minneapolis.

"Slit skirts are going out of style." Perhaps it will be no more than prudent for mere men to lock up his extra pair of trousers.

Fewer needle gangs on the streets and more in the home might be some advantage and solve civic problems for New York.

Father probably will get, besides the Christmas bills, a lot of fussy things with which to clutter up his desk.

JANESVILLE BANKS TO HOLD CHARTERS

Two National Banks Will Probably Support New System Provided Under Currency Law.

The First National and Rock County National banks of this city will doubtless elect to retain their national bank charters and will support the new banking system of the United States government as provided by the Glass-Owen currency bill, which was signed by President Wilson at the White House last night.

"Of course we have taken no action on the matter as yet," said John G. Rexford, president of the First National, "but my impression and advice would be that the bank support the provisions of the new law. It will mean some changes in the system and just what the effect will be on business conditions it is impossible to say at this time." Rexford felt confident that it was to the advantage of the country banks to stay by the national system and in his opinion the majority of them would.

"We'll have to wait until we make a more careful study of the new law before we decide definitely as to our future course," said Frank H. Jackson, cashier of the Rock county national, "it is quite probable, however, that we will continue as a national bank."

Caustic Calkins dropped his watch on the sidewalk. "Did it stop?" inquired Solicitous Jones. "As the flagging is four inches thick," replied Calkins, "it did. But I think, if I got a heavier watch it may go through next time."

DR. BEATON TO GIVE FAREWELL ADDRESSES

Occupies Pulpit of Congregational Church for Last Time as Pastor on Sunday Next.

The Rev. David Beaton will deliver his farewell sermons to the members of the Congregational church and his friends in this city on Sunday, Dec. 28, which will be the last time that he will occupy the pulpit of the local church as pastor. The subject of the sermon at the morning service at ten-thirty will be "The Minister's Message to His Own Times," and in the evening at seven-thirty the discourse will be "The Minister and His Fellow Citizens."

Dr. Beaton will leave Chicago for the Pacific coast on Jan. 1st and will stay in the vicinity of San Francisco for several weeks. He will supply the First Congregational church at Oakland the second largest of the denomination on the coast, and then will proceed to Los Angeles, to engage in the university extension work. In a letter to the Gazette Dr. Beaton promises to re-usher his Janesville friends with an occasional letter for publication and his many friends in Southern Wisconsin will be glad to learn of his successes in the western field.

In his letter he writes: "I want to thank you for your generous use of space in your paper during my residence here and to acknowledge its great value in my work. I shall always look back with great pleasure on the years spent in Janesville and am proud of the friends I have found here."

WORKMEN ON BRIDGE TO ENJOY HOLIDAY

Gould Company's Employees in This City Will Have a Rest on Christmas Day.

Work on the new Milwaukee street bridge will be suspended for the day on Thursday and the employees of the Gould company in this city will enjoy the Christmas holiday. The workmen have been most faithful in their labors and have been willing to labor nights and Sundays to rush the job to completion. They enjoyed a rest on Thanksgiving and are entitled to an opportunity to enjoy Christmas.

According to present indications the cement floor of the bridge will be laid by Saturday night and the brick paving will be nearly completed. If the weather holds good the bridge will be practically completed by January 1st.

The cement spindles for the balustrade are being cast at the Keystone Cement company's plant and will be installed as soon as the bridge floor is paved. The frame for the railings will then be fitted on top of the spindles and the cement will be poured.

Paper Sails a Success.
Paper may be so treated as to make it suitable for sails for light vessels. Such sails are not woven from strands or threads, but are made up from compressed sheets of paper, which are made in the regular way, the pulp having been thoroughly mixed with certain chemicals and other substances. These paper sails are inexpensive compared with good canvas stock or rubber material.

"THE OCTORON"
The story of this three-part production of Dion Boucicault's masterpiece, which is the feature of the special dime program at the Lyric and Majestic tomorrow afternoon and evening.
George Peyton, returning home after a long stay abroad, falls in love with Zoe, an octroon and a former slave. The girl is his mother's companion. George in turn, is loved by Dora the daughter of a neighbor.
Mrs. Peyton is heavily in debt to McCloskey, her former overseer. The man tries to make love to Zoe, but is foiled by Scudder, Mrs. Peyton's overseer. McCloskey steals the document which gives the Octroon her freedom. George asks the girl to be his wife. Zoe refuses because of her negro blood.
Paul, a quadroon boy, returns with the mail. Wahnotee, an Indian, is his devoted companion. McCloskey, knowing Mrs. Peyton expects a large draft from abroad, attempts to steal the mail bag from the boy. Wahnotee blocks his plan.
Scudder leaves his camera standing in the yard. Paul poses in front of the camera. To get the proper exposure he orders Wahnotee to remove the lens cap, run to a nearby oak and return. The Indian obeys. While he is gone, McCloskey kills the lad and ransacks the bag. He steals Mrs. Peyton's draft.
The Indian finds his little friend dead. He lays the boy's death to the camera and smashes it. The exposed plate, however, is intact. Later, the sheriff seizes the Peyton slaves to liquidate the debt. Dora offers to marry George and pay McCloskey the money. George tells of his love for Zoe and declines her offer.
McCloskey demands that the Octroon be sold as a slave. The paper giving her freedom cannot be found and Zoe is sold at auction. McCloskey buys her. George is heartbroken.
McCloskey allows Zoe to remain with Mrs. Peyton for one more night. The Octroon resolves to kill herself rather than become the man's slave. George pleads with her to elope with him, but the girl refuses. She secures a bottle of poison.
Wahnotee is accused of Paul's murder. He relates the story of the lad's death and lays the blame upon the camera. Scudder still has the plate. Thinking it may solve the mystery, the man develops it. The result shows McCloskey in the act of killing Paul. The man is seized. Scudder finds Mrs. Peyton's draft and Zoe's freedom document upon McCloskey.
The villain is placed aboard a steamer to be taken to jail. Wahnotee follows. In an attempt to escape, McCloskey accidentally sets fire to the boat. He leaps overboard. Wahnotee swims after him. McCloskey learns of the terrible Nemesis following him. He comes upon Scudder and pleads for assistance. The man hands him a knife and orders him to fight it out with the savage. In the terrific struggle that ensues, McCloskey meets his death.
Zoe drinks the poison. George, his mother and Dora, enter and the Octroon confesses her deed. George is frantic, but Zoe reminds him of the blood obstacle which would have prevented their happiness. She takes Dora's hand and places it in George's clasp.
Scudder enters with the news of McCloskey's treachery. But he comes too late—Zoe is dead.

TWO SUSPECTS WERE LANDED IN LOCK-UP

ALLEGED AGENTS FOR EASTERN PUBLICATION HELD FOR TRIAL.

THOUGHT TO BE CROOKS

Charged With Having Obtained Money Under False Pretenses From Local Business Men.

Held on the charge of having obtained money under false pretenses, J. L. Harris and F. C. Clumm, both living New York as their residence and alleged that they were agents for the Leslie-Judge Publishing Company of New York City, were taken in custody by the police last evening and are held for trial in the municipal court.

It appears these two men, who represented themselves as agents for the above mentioned magazines have been working in and out of Janesville for some weeks past, particularly among the retail liquor dealers, seeking subscriptions for the magazines and collecting sums ranging from forty cents to five dollars, as first payment for the year's subscription. They represented to the prospective purchasers, that both Leslie and Judge publications, were about to start a crusade on anti-prohibition and that it would be to their advantage to aid the cause. That there was a trifle of cause was evidenced by the fact that after seeking to enlist one victim the police were notified and Officers Kemp and Fowler responded. The two men fled, but were caught by the police in a saloon and taken to the city hall. Both men professed entire innocence of any wrong doing and played the injured act.

Chief Ransom closely questioned them and then took them to the office of Mayor Palters who probed the matter to the bottom and told them they could not work any more in the city. They agreed to leave at once and were given their liberty. A few minutes later one of their victims arrived at the city, having been notified by telephone of the men's arrest and arrest of their actions. It was then decided to leave at once and were given their liberty. A few minutes later one of their victims arrived at the city, having been notified by telephone of the men's arrest and arrest of their actions. It was then decided to leave at once and were given their liberty.

Chief Ransom at once notified his officers and a watch was kept at the depots and interurban car station. Officer Kemp who had originally arrested them was watching the interurban car leaving the city at eight while he sent special Officer Worthington to the car to go as far as the Spring Brook bridge. When the street the two men boarded the car having gone down to Racine street on the Franklin street line, crossed the bridge and taken the interurban car at Sharon street where they thought they were safe from arrest.

They were taken to the city hall where a complaint charging them with obtaining money under false pretenses was lodged against them and they were taken to jail to await their hearing today. Meanwhile Chief Ransom communicated with the Milwaukee office of the Leslie-Judge Company and found from the manager there that these men were not authorized agents and that he believed them to be two well known crooks who have made hundreds of dollars from unsuspecting liquor dealers. A member of his office force will arrive here this afternoon to identify them and the manager himself will be here on Friday to appear against them. Meanwhile the Leslie-Judge Company of New York, was notified and the following telegram explains the situation from their point of view.

New York, N. Y., Dec 24, 1913.
No such parties as Harris and Clumm, they are probably Hamilton and Banks, two frauds who have been obtaining money for hundreds of dollars in Wisconsin by the scheme you mention. Writing particulars.

This afternoon at two the two men were arraigned before Judge Maxfield but their case was continued until four when an agent from the Milwaukee office of the Leslie-Judge Company arrived to see if he could identify them. Later a second telegram was received from the Leslie-Judge Company in New York stating they were most anxious to apprehend Hamilton and Banks and had written full details of their transactions.

The two men will doubtless be the guests of Sheriff Whipple over the Christmas holidays and enjoy his hospitality until Friday when it is expected they will be formally arraigned in the municipal court.

CITY'S CONTENTION MAY BE UNTOUCHED

Action Contemplated by County in Re-assessment Case May Not Decide Real Point Involved.

That the contemplated action on the part of Rock county to recover the cost of the reassessment of the city of Janesville, which was withheld by state officials from funds due to the county, may not necessarily decide the real point at issue in the case, the fact as to whether the city or the state should stand the reassessment expense, was the opinion of City Attorney Dougherty, who discussed the matter today. Mr. Dougherty maintained that the county will get no money without question and that that question will be decided in the circuit court for Dane county in the case to be brought against the state by District Attorney Dunwiddie. The act of the state in retaining the money from the county funds was nothing less than daylight robbery, declared Mr. Dougherty. This controversy between the state and county may be adjudicated without settling the case between the city and state. The city still holds its first contention that the cost of the reassessment should be stood by the state and that the city is in no way liable for the amount.

TWENTY PRIZES ARE AWARDED WINNERS

Many Handed in Correct Answers to the Famous Buildings Contest.

The flood of replies and lists received in the "Famous Buildings Contest" on the unique composite illustration published in our issue on Monday proved several things conclusively. First of all the novelty of the test interested a much larger number of people than usually participate in contests of any kind. That the contest interested all classes was demonstrated by the variety of stationery used by contestants. The answers received clearly show that this contest stimulated much more careful thought on the part of those who submitted lists. This in itself made it well worth while entirely aside from the fact that the winners will encircle the globe with Lyman H. Howe at the Myers theatre on Dec. 26, as a reward for sending in the lists nearest correct. The contest indicates, too, that more women manifest interest in a contest of such an educational nature than do men. The contest was a very successful one and named correctly a majority of the structures shown in the illustration, thereby showing that readers of this newspaper are well-read and well-informed. Of course, the contest also gave an intimate knowledge of the most historic, important, longest, highest and most beautiful edifices reared by man and our readers are not to be blamed for being able to name so many of the group. There are a few interesting facts developed by the contest. The picture least recognized was that of the Kremlin in Moscow. Of course, it was recognized our national capital at Washington and the Eiffel Tower was also recognized by nearly every contestant. The average number of correct names given in the lists sent to the "Famous Buildings Editor" is so high that our readers may feel justly proud of their retentive memories, a close scrutiny of each list submitted showed that the Gazette lists nearest correct came from the following:

As far as the answers were received at the Gazette office the time of receipt was numbered in the hour of the mailing stamp was counted. Starting at the first received the list was carefully gone over and the first twenty whose answers were correct were checked off and named the winners by the Contest Editor. There were many others who had the correct answers but their letters were not received at the Gazette office in time. It is unfortunate that all the persons who guessed correctly could not be favored but unfortunately were not but twenty tickets. These tickets were placed in envelopes and will be left at the box office of the Myers theatre, where they can be obtained. The following is the list of winners:

Mrs. Dan Skelly, 715 Fourth Ave., city; George McLaughlin, 1042 Milton Ave., city; Margaret Ward, 1112 Racine St., city; Elmer Dutton, 719 Milton Ave., city; George Rasmussen, 326 Fifth Ave., city; Harry Jorg, 618 Prairie Ave., city; Miss Evelyn Dixon, 458 N. Terrace St., city; Henry Ford, 1112 Racine St., city; Harold C. Buell, 350 S. Jackson St., city; Mrs. E. H. Johnson, Evansville, Wis., corner Maple and Church Sts.; Charles Hym, Evansville, Wis.; Malcolm Palmer Mout, 214 S. Wisconsin St., city; Miss Maude V. Dickson, 312 Grand Ave., city; Robert Lane, 258 S. Jackson St., city; Richard W. Farnsworth, 321 Court St., city; William Farnsworth, 321 Court St., city; Lyman B. Kimball, 420 Third St., city; Alice Kimball, 420 Third St., city; Raymond Dutton, 719 Milton Ave., city; and Mrs. J. L. city.

A reserved seat ticket to Lyman H. Howe's Travel Festival at the Myers theatre, was left today by the "Famous Buildings Editor" of the Gazette, for each of these winners at the Myers Theatre. As a fitting reward, they will grapple the globe Thursday evening, Mr. Howe's perennially popular Travel Festival and witness thrilling rescues of survivors from an ocean greyhound during a terrific gale; a superb reproduction of the most astounding work of nature as represented by the Grand Canyon of Arizona and including a trip to the bottom of the canyon, Navajo industries and Eoni Indian customs; and a confounding of several hundred thousand barrels of oil. They will participate in an aerobline ride over Paris; see wondrous forms of marine life; a pictorial study in palmistry; yachting and motor racing; and a motor ride through the French Alps besides enjoying many other delightful travel experiences such as are afforded only by Mr. Howe's realistic and unique attraction.

SECOND DRUG THEFT IS REPORTED TODAY

Dr. James Mills Has Missed Two Bottles of Cocaine Tablets from His Office Recently.

That cocaine fiends are making systematic raids on the office of Dr. James Mills was further substantiated today when it was learned that Dr. James Mills had on two occasions recently missed a quantity of the drug from his office. The first time the bottle which had contained the tablets was found on the floor with the contents missing. It had been filled with the drug and placed on the shelf the night before. When Dr. Mills was passing another bottle of the drug, it was missed, bottle and all. On neither occasion were any other drugs or articles in the office disturbed. Entrance must have been gained by climbing over the fence. Coupled with the raid on Dr. Edson's office where a quantity of the same drug was taken, the situation warrants a careful police investigation.

CHRISTMAS BASKETS DISTRIBUTED AMONG HOMES IN THE CITY

REAL SANTA TRAVELED BY AUTO WITH DINNERS AND TOYS FOR CHILDREN.

MANY PATHETIC SIGHTS

Many Families Who Would Otherwise Have Had a Cheerless Christmas Gladdened by Gifts.

Christmas baskets, with a bit of the real Christmas spirit, found their way into many homes in Janesville yesterday through the generosity of the big hearted men and women who contributed to the cause, with money and gifts, with individual labor and self-denial, through the agency of the volunteer committee headed by Father Henry Willmann and the young ladies of the Associated Charities who distributed the gifts left at the Gazette office.

It was a real Santa Claus, with his red fur suit, his white whiskers, his fur coat and all, that distributed the baskets at the various little homes. True, he came by automobile, but he was there just the same and the belief of the little ones who were given Santa was in many cases pathetic. One little chap stood and looked, eyes popping out of his head, his mouth wide open in wonderment at the sight of a real live Santa who brought him toys and his poor hard working mother, a basket of provisions for the Christmas dinner.

Unless one really travelled with Santa and his auto, they could not realize that right here in Janesville such homes as were visited really existed. One reads of the squalor and bitter poverty of the crowded tenements, but here in little shacks, that hardly bear the name of houses where families are living in one tiny room, where they cooked, ate, slept, and suffered, to them the basket was a blessing. To them the bears of the distributors went out in sympathy.

There were homes found in corners where it would never be believed houses could exist, where it was impossible to discover where they had not been for the big hearted men and women of the Associated Charities who knew of the want and suffering. Their duty, duty, duty, the mother away working to earn the bread and butter for her children's mouths, the husband, in some cases a worthless drunken, shiftless sort, who had no other way of earning his wife's earnings to buy liquor, steeped in drink even when the visitors came.

In one home there was a little family with the home mother a girl of but fourteen, her mother away washing and cleaning. The little home mother was doing her best to keep the home clean, alas a hopeless task, to assume and care for her little brothers and sister and get found time to tell the Santa Claus party of another family next door. "Who are so awfully poor," she said, they really need something.

In this class of homes went the Christmas baskets of toys and food. In thirty-seven little stockings Christmas morning will be found toys and candy, a bit of a book, tiny ribbon for dolls' hair, perhaps a doll itself, toy ball and games to make the day a happy one to while away future hours while mother is away working that they may eat.

In fifteen families supplies for a Christmas dinner, nice plump chickens, a bit of a roast, a good clean piece of meat, a few items for the table and toys and presents were left. Enough to provide for fifty persons for Christmas day with something left over for the next day. Twelve other families were cared for by individuals or clubs of young ladies who worked in conjunction with the Christmas Cheer committee that in many homes Christmas will mean something after all.

Was it worth while? Was it worth the sacrifice of time and labor to make this possible? One who went to visit those homes to find the answer. Seventy dollars was contributed, presents were sent in by many new toys, beautiful provisions provided and the remaining amount of money was after the committee finishes their work tonight will be turned to the treasury of the Associated Charities for use during the coming winter months.

Aside from this work of labor and love the little gathering of children at the city hall yesterday, where Miss Anderson, the city nurse, had her tree, her distribution of gifts to the little people in whose homes she goes to soothe the sick and aid the suffering, was just another evidence of the Christmas spirit. Could one have peeped into the room when the tree was disclosed, when the wondering eyes saw the real dolly, the real little bedstead, the real toys, the bags of fruit and candy, it would have brought tears to your eyes.

Christmas season is a time of gift giving. To the humble manger of our Lord came the Wise Men of the East with their offerings to the new born King. Since then we have continued giving gifts to our friends at this season of the year, this celebration of our Saviour's natal day. But the little visits Tuesday the Christmas tree at the city hall, the spirit of the giving was changed. Christmas means much more to those who aided in the work that it did. The gifts of gold, frankincense and myrrh given to the infant Jesus are magnified today with the baskets of good cheer distributed in His name.

DEATH TAKES BOY; GIRL WILL LIVE; CHARGED MOTHER IS THEIR POISONER

Laura and Norris Buffon.

Norris Buffon, four-year-old son of Mrs. Cynthia Buffon of Little Valley, N. Y., died last May. It is now believed the boy's death was caused by arsenic poisoning, which also caused the death of his father in July of this year. The mother and her lover, Ernest Frahm, have been indicted for first degree murder for the death of the father.

Laura Buffon is the ten-year-old daughter of the accused woman. She is now dead as the result of arsenic poisoning. It is alleged the drug was administered by the mother in an attempt to get rid of the entire family so that she might be free to accept the love of Ernest Frahm. Though the little girl's body is reduced to a mass of skin and bones, physicians say she will recover in a year if given the best of drug.

FREDERICK THE SENSITIVE

By MAX HOGE.

The woman in the heliotrope gown sighed. "They certainly have queer teachers in the schools nowadays," she confided to the woman in grape color. "Your Evangeline is in the same class with my Frederick, isn't she? Well, what do you think of that Miss Etterick they have to teach them?"

"I—I don't know," confessed the woman in grape color. "I've been so busy getting the house cleaned and doing the other fall work that I haven't had time to visit the school." "Then you'd better!" solemnly declared the woman in heliotrope. "My dear, some one ought to do something! Why, when I think of Frederick in that Miss Etterick's charge all year, and with his sensitive nature, I am terribly upset! Do you know what that woman did? Wrote me a note saying that Frederick was not doing well in his arithmetic. She said he evidently needed to put more work on it!"

"Well, after the receipt of that note I went to the school just as fast as I could!"

"Miss Etterick," I said to her, "I don't suppose you realize that when you criticize Frederick you are crushing all the life and spirit out of him. He is not like other boys, I said. 'He needs encouragement and help and interest, and I am sure he works very hard!'"

"She sort of sighed and looked at me in a cold way. You could see she was not trying in the least to make herself agreeable. 'Help! Interest!' She repeated the words."

"And then she declared that she devoted twice as much time to Frederick as to any other boy in the class and that she was perfectly discouraged at his lack of interest. She said he knew nothing at all that day about his lesson."

"I explained to her that Frederick had had no time to study at home the previous evening because I had taken him to a children's party—and she had the effrontery to say that children shouldn't go to parties on school nights! That was too ridiculous, for the party was at the Bertons. I told her so—and she said stolidly: 'What of it?' The Bertons! Why, I know women who'd give their eye teeth to get their children noticed by the Bertons!"

"Oh, I think we can live without the Bertons!" Declared the woman.

"I'm sorry you take it so hard," said the woman in heliotrope. "But we were speaking about Miss Etterick. I told her that Frederick was nervous and sensitive and that I was not going to have him ruin his constitution studying and become a nervous wreck. I pointed out to her that what she was being paid for was to get children through her grade without bothering the parents, who have many cares and responsibilities.

"If you were a capable teacher, Miss Etterick," I said, "instead of complaining about poor little Frederick and making his life miserable with your nagging you would know what to do to push him ahead! I am sure that's what a teacher ought to do."

"Really, my dear, I thought for a minute that awful woman was going to be inhumanly insolent. She said something about its not being her duty to furnish brains for her pupils, but I ignored it. She is utterly impossible."

"I shall expect," I told her, firmly, "good reports from Frederick from now on!"

"I am sure," she said, "I hope you'll get them! But if you want good reports from him you must make him study!"

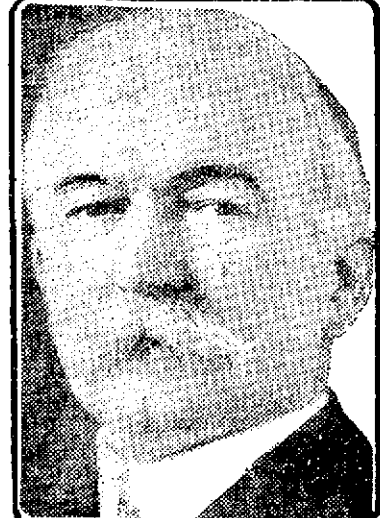

"Miss Etterick," I replied, "I am endeavoring to bring up my son in a way that will encourage him to do things without being made! I would not insult his intelligence by ordering him to do anything!"

"With your heartless ideas about children," I told her, "I wonder how you manage to hold your position. If Frederick fails to pass to the next grade at the end of the year I shall know the reason! It will be because he was worked to death by you and his nerves shattered!"

"Then I walked away and left her speechless. I think it was a shock to her to see her real self so accurately described. My dear, I advise you to go and see what that woman is doing to Evangeline before it is too late! The idea of her trying to make my Frederick study against his will when Frederick is so sensitive!"—Chicago Daily News.

Light on the Spot.

An attachment has been made to the revolver by a French inventor by which the weapon in the hands of a greenhorn is as deadly as in those of a dead-sure shot. A small and powerful electric lamp is mounted on the weapon in such a manner that a circle of light is projected upon the target and the bullet will strike the center of the ring. This particular location is marked by a dark spot, and this spot being placed over the heart of an adversary and the trigger pulled the bullet cannot fail in its deadly work.

COMMERCIAL CLUB SUDDENLY WORRIED OVER NEW BRIDGE

Fears City Council Has Overlooked Certain Construction Matters So Files a Formal Communication.

Evidently fearing that the city council, the board of public works and the Gould Construction company which has the contract with the city for the building of the concrete bridge over Rock river at Milwaukee street, have overlooked certain important construction matters will reference to the new structure, the Janesville Commercial club has interested itself in the case and brings the question to the attention of the council in a written communication signed by Secretary Frank E. Lane.

The letter was received at the meeting of the council Tuesday afternoon and was placed on file without discussion or comment of any kind.

At a recent meeting of the Commercial club directors, the bridge question was discussed and the communication authorized. The note read as follows:

"Whereas the question of filling in and paving of the Milwaukee street bridge, and having brought to the attention of this board, particularly the possibility of the filling, setting, an settling of the concrete and the likelihood of the concrete base cracking under the paving; also the matter of water holes for the drawing of the water;

"Therefore be it resolved that these questions, which have been suggested, be brought to the attention of the mayor and councilmen for their consideration.

City officials, who were plainly indignant at the attitude taken by the club directors, were not inclined to any comment. City Attorney Dougherty vouchsafed the information that the contract with the bridge company contained a two-year guarantee clause, and that the city had the privilege of holding up part payment of the contract if they found any possible defects in the construction.

The board of public works submitted a report to the council yesterday on the status of the bridge work and recommended payment of $5,000 which was allowed to the Gould company. This makes a total of $24,000 which has been paid by the city of the work thus far completed, which is seventy-five percent of actual value.

An order will be drawn in favor of McVicar Brothers for $309.65 for sewer and sewer extensions on Division street, Vista and Garfield avenues, in accordance with the recommendation of the board of public works.

A resolution was passed directing the Janesville Electric company to erect a 60 candle-power light on South Center avenue at or near the south viaduct. The action was deemed wise following complaints which have been received from persons who travel that way late at night, the latest case being with reference to the accident of two girls employed at the blind institute.

The regular salary list for the month of December was allowed and city officials will have to wait for their pay until after Christmas.

Thurston Mason was appointed special police officer without pay. He is employed as watchman at the east side Odd Fellows' hall.

Myers Theatre

LYMAN HOWE PICTURES.

No other product of human invention has made such wondrous progress or risen with such amazing swiftness as animated photography as presented by Lyman H. Howe.

True, in our day and generation there is a legion of other "picture shows" of varying degrees of merit, good, bad and indifferent; but when ever anyone refers to the one exhibition of this nature that is perfect to the minutest detail it is Lyman H. Howe's Travel Festival which comes to the Myers Theatre on Tuesday, 25th and 26th. It stands alone—pre-eminent. No other challenges comparison with it. This opinion is unanimous and universal even among exhibitors themselves as well as the public at large. East, west, north and south—it is hailed as the matchless—the model exhibition of its kind—uncompared because incomparable. No other exhibition vivifies history, imprisons the sun's rays so effectively, brings the march of the vicissitudes, or kindles in our minds visions of the world at large, so realistically as does Mr. Howe's perennially popular entertainment.

"WITHIN THE LAW."

Miss Jane Gordon, a talented and beautiful young actress of undisputed charm, heads the excellent cast the American Play company has engaged for "Within The Law," the stirring new drama of modern metropolitan life which will be attractive at the Myers on Tuesday, January 13. Miss Gordon portrays the role of a girl who, after spending three years in prison for a crime of which she is innocent, attempts to re-establish herself among reputable people but is persecuted by the police, hounded out of honest employment and forced into a life of crime. From a timid, shrinking girl she develops into a brilliant, daring woman of cleverness and ingenuity, becoming the leader of a band of crooks who prey upon society at will and manage to avoid the clutches of the police by remaining always "within the law," although they employ the artifices and technicalities of the law to safeguard their illegitimate pursuits. She also avenges herself upon the man who unjustly sent her to prison, almost breaking her heart, through his son and heir. Eventually she falls in love with the young man and is restored to her rightful position in society. Critics in New York and Chicago, in both of which cities this play is the current theatrical triumph, unanimously declared "Within The Law" the most thrilling drama given for the American stage in the past decade.

FRANK WINNIGER'S COMPANY.

Frank Winniger, the hilariously funny Dutch comedian, this year has taken a step nearer approaching his ideal. His varieties of musical comedies, which come to the Myers Theatre for eight nights, with usual matinees, opening Sunday, December 25, incorporate his original ideals coupled with those gained in his last summer's vacation abroad. He found the sentiment running toward light plays featuring music. His offering this year, a departure and an innovation with popular-priced companies, sparkles in its newness. The company carries its own seven-piece orchestra and twenty-five people.

PREBYTERIANS CALL REVEREND RARISOE

Nebraska Divine Called to Local Pulpit by Congregation.

At the meeting of the directors and congregation of the First Presbyterian church, Monday night, a call was extended to Rev. George E. Rariso of Linden, Nebraska, to succeed Rev. J. V. McLaughlin, who left the Janesville pulpit some time ago. No word as yet has been received as to whether Rariso, but it is expected that he will accept the call by January first.

Dr. Rariso delivered a sermon from the Presbyterian pulpit several weeks ago and visited in the city for several days. He was graduated from the McCormick seminary of Chicago in 1907 and has had a wide experience in theological work, having been a Y. M. C. A. worker before entering the pulpit and also done effective work among foreign laborers of Chicago, helping him in obtaining an education. Mr. Rariso is married and has two children, and the directors hope for his acceptance.

Cattle had seven thousand receipts and prices were ten cents higher than yesterday's markings. Hogs with twenty-three thousand receipts were bringing prices five cents above Tuesday's average, the bulk of sales going at $7.50 and $7.85. The barometric depression that was in the Ohio valley yesterday is now in the Atlantic off New England. It was attended by widespread rains in the East. Over an inch fell at New York and Montreal.

The depression that was in the Rocky Mountain region is now over Texas, and seems about to follow the course of the disturbance that is now off New England. It is attended by rain and snow in Oklahoma, Missouri and Kansas. An area of high barometer of no great strength occupies the Rocky mountain plateau region, and is the cause of falling temperature in those districts. The temperature is especially low in western Canada, a minimum of 20 degrees below zero being reported at Prince Albert this morning.

Unanimous on the Point.

The British Weekly tells a good story of the late poet laureate, Mr. Alfred Austin. He had been talking a good deal about himself after a dinner, as was his wont, to the annoyance of the other guests, and at last he said: "Lady —, is it time for the poet laureate to go to bed?" And everyone in the room said "Yes."

Right-Handed Plants.

That there are right-handed plants and left-handed plants has been reported to the Cambridge (England) Philosophical society by R. H. Comp-ton. In an examination of eight varieties of two-rowed barley the first leaf was found to twist to the left in 58 per cent of more than 12,000 seedlings, and an excess of left-handed growth was found also in millet and in oats. In corn there seemed to be no marked tendency either way. No evidence of hereditary peculiarity appears to have been obtained and no special significance of the results is pointed out.

We Keep the Quality Up

HER GREAT ACHIEVEMENT

By C. K. KNOX.

"Oh, Mrs. Lee," cried that good woman's nearest neighbor, "will you come over to my flat and see if I have laid the pattern of my goods the right way? I'm going to make a dress all by myself, and I know Jack will be awfully proud of me. You see, he has the most absurd idea that I'm just a doll, and I'm determined to show him that I am as capable as any young married woman."

"Certainly Mrs. Henry," she said. Then when her eyes fell on the pattern which was spread on the Henrys' dining table, she exclaimed: "Why, you're making the bodice one way of the goods, and the skirt the other. It's too bad but that will never do."

"Well, I don't see how I can ever get the dress out of this piece of material if we have to be so particular," mourned its owner. "It was a remnant and I got it cheap. I want to show Jack how economically I can get up a costume."

"When there's an up and down design," Mrs. Lee said, smiling, "it is necessary to have all the parts run in the same direction. Still, by facing the skirt instead of hemming it, I believe there'll be plenty."

"I simply can't make head or tail of the thing," she said, as she held up the bodice of her gown which she was basting. "See what a weird shape it is. I don't believe the pattern is right."

Mrs. Lee took the garment and examined it critically.

Then she laughed. "You have mistaken the sleeves for the fronts, and basted in the under arm pieces wrong side up," she announced. "I believe I'd better pin it together for you the way it goes."

Mrs. Lee had iced her cake and was sitting down to her desk to write a letter when a knock at the kitchen door took her back to the rear of the flat.

"Oh, I thought you'd be out here or I'd have gone to the front door," said Mrs. Henry. "See, I'm ready to have you fit me. Haven't I basted this up quickly? Thank you so much for sticking in those pins. Now, I just take it in where you've planned, don't I? If you don't mind I'll sit down here to do it, because, perhaps, it would be well for me to slip it on again for your inspection before it's really sewed."

After another fitting Mrs. Lee rebasted the necessary alterations herself and showed Mrs. Henry just where to stitch the seams.

"I forgot to ask if I could use your sewing machine," she remarked, sweetly.

"I'm Ready to Have You Fit Me."

ly. "You know I haven't one yet, but I'm sure when Jack sees what a stylish dress I can make he'll get me one."

"Leave the upper thread quite long," said Mrs. Lee, after threading the machine.

"What in the world do you suppose is the trouble?" exclaimed Mrs. Henry after a few moments of jerky stitching. "The needle jumps up and down and it isn't sewing at all. Oh, dear! Now the needle's broken."

"I'll fix it for you," Mrs. Lee rose from her desk. "I'm afraid you left the lower thread a little too long. It tangled in the bobbin. Now, you see, the new needle seems to run peacefully."

"Thank you. I'm awfully glad to learn to run the machine because now I can tell Jack that I know how. Oh, dear. It's acting up again."

"Perhaps I'd better do the seams for you, Mrs. Henry?"

"Oh, if you only will. I'll glance through the fashions in this magazine of yours to get an idea for the trimming."

When at last the stitching was done Mrs. Lee kept her promise about facing the skirt, having pressed the seams after discovering Mrs. Henry's peculiar knack of ironing more wrinkles in than out.

The next morning Mrs. Henry, glowing with pride, burst into Mrs. Lee's kitchen.

"I came in to tell you that Jack is simply delighted with my new gown," she announced. "He thinks I'm a perfect wonder to have accomplished so much yesterday. What do you think? He says for me to meet him downtown this afternoon and he'll buy me anything I want for another dress. You see, now that I can make my own clothes I can afford to have a lot more things than when I had to pay a dressmaker. Isn't it splendid?"

"I'll be back in a minute to get you to pin in the sleeves."—Chicago Daily News.

FORTY YEARS AGO

Janesville Daily Gazette, Dec. 24, 1873.—Small Fire: An alarm of fire was sounded this morning caused by the discovery of a warm spot in the rear of the back rooms of the J. W. Nash's fruit and confectionery establishment at 73 West Milwaukee street. Smoke was coming through the sides of the building, as Mr. Nash is located in the center of a wooden row of buildings filled with valuable goods. There was considerable excitement in the neighborhood for a few moments. The fire department turned out lively but its services were not needed as a few pails of water was sufficient to put a quietus on the incipient conflagration. There is a furnace in the store for the purpose of sugar boiling, which rested on a single layer of bricks on the floor. The boards underneath took fire from the heat of the furnace and smoldered all night, filling the building with smoke. Nash will probably place more bricks under his furnace before he boils any more sugar.

A son of T. R. Ross accidentally lodged a copper pistol cartridge in one of his bronchial tubes some two weeks ago and it is feared death will be the result. A surgical operation of an exceedingly dangerous nature is the last resort and it will be performed tomorrow.

MISTLETOE HAS A PECULIAR ORIGIN

Because Roots Did Not Come Out of Ground, Is Reason for It Being Hung High.

The good old custom of hanging the mistletoe from the ceiling at the Christmas festivities is said to have its origin in the idea that since the plant did not have its roots in the ground nor part of it should ever be permitted to touch the earth.

The religious aspect of the mistletoe tradition, which had its origin in the Druidical rites and the gathering of it by the archdruid with his golden sickle, merged later into a purely social symbol, and the idea of simple hospitality developed into one of merry-making and a somewhat riotous entertainment.

There is an ancient belief that the mistletoe was the tree from which the holy cross was hewn and that after this was made the plant withered and ever afterward became a mere parasitic growth, clinging for support to other sturdier trees.

Other stories, however, credit it with divine gifts in the healing of disease and the expulsion of evil spirits. Ram, the high priest of the Celts, related in a dream the intimation that by means of the plant he would be enabled to save his people from the plague which was decimating them.

In many parts of the United Kingdom the silver berries and the gray-green leaves of the mistletoe are looked upon as anything but an emblem of good cheer; on the contrary the plant is regarded with dread as being the bringer of ill luck and the sign of ill omen. This superstition exists both in Devonshire and in Ireland, and strange to say, in neither of these places does the plant flourish, owing, report has it, to the fact that the little opaque berry is largely responsible for the mystic character which has been enjoyed among the peoples of diverse nations from the earliest historical times.

In the sixth book of the Aeneid a lengthy description of the mistletoe is given by Virgil, who makes the Sibyl describe to his hero the exact spot in hedges where he will find it growing. There is little doubt that the strange ethereal appearance of the little opaque berry is largely responsible for the mystic character which has been enjoyed among the peoples of diverse nations from the earliest historical times.

On the Spur of the Moment

Old Docs and New.

Oh, what has become of the old-fashioned doc, who carried a satchel containing a stock of pills and squills.

The old-fashioned party without any frills? He doctored our pains and our aches and our chills.

And never was quick at collecting his bills. The old-fashioned doc wore a shiny high hat.

And a Prince Albert coat and white tie, and all that; And his one-horse shay.

Traveled slowly all day. He wore flowing whiskers, or mustache, and a high-collared shirt.

Which offered a place for the microbes to stay; But the old-fashioned doc worried not about germs.

He and the bacilli were on splendid terms. The new-fashioned doc, he's a dinger all right.

He's on the job always from morning till night. His face is shaved clean, his hip is suave and serene.

And he dashes about in a high-powered machine. The new-fashioned doc is a business man, too.

He carries no bundle of bills long past due—He's up to the minute, There's good money in it.

When a new germ appears, he is prompt to fight. He will swat it and stab it and smash it and skin it.

The old-fashioned doc is no more in the land; The new-fashioned doc gets the calls, understand?

Answered. An insurance company has received the following letter from a man in Wisconsin:

"Gentlemen—Your letter asking me to become a late lamented under your auspices has been received. I take pleasure in replying to about one-tenth of the questions you have asked me.

"I have never died before, so far as I know. If I am a reincarnation, I am satisfied that in the previous existence I was a goat.

"I have all of the symptoms that you mention and confess that I must have about 90 per cent. of the diseases you mention although I feel all right, outside of the symptoms.

"My great grandfather did not die of croup. I think it was spavin. I am sure it was not appendicitis. They did not have appendicitis then.

"I have a full set of teeth. They don't fit, but the mail order house sent me the wrong set and promises to rectify the mistake.

"I do not drive an automobile, work in a dynamite factory or go out gathering poison ivy.

"I do not even spray potato bugs with Paris green. We have no gas heater in our house.

"No, my wife does not do the cooking. We have an excellent cook.

"As I have never died before, I cannot answer the questions as to how many times I have died and whether it is an acquired or a hereditary habit.

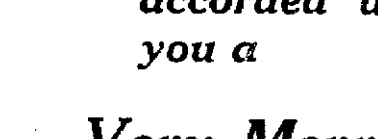

"I do not practice on the cornet or sing or speak pieces in public, so the danger to life and limb from those sources is eliminated.

"I have no desire to travel in Mexico, monkey with gasoline stoves, go over Niagara Falls in a barrel, pick up live trolley wires or chase moonshiners in Kentucky. So we think I am a fair risk.

"My wife does not swat flies with a baseball bat.

"Sincerely yours, "A—W—"

Weak Heart

Many people suffer from weak hearts. They may experience shortness of breath on exertion, pain over the heart, or dizzy feelings, oppressed breathing after meals or their eyes become blurred, the heart is not sufficiently strong to pump blood to the extremities, and they have cold hands and feet, or poor appetite because of weakened blood supply to the stomach. A heart tonic and alterative should be taken which has no bad after-effect. Such is which contains no dangerous narcotics or alcohol.

It helps the human system in the constant manufacture of rich, red blood. It helps the stomach to assimilate or take up the proper elements from the food, thereby helping digestion and curing dyspepsia, heart-burn and many uncomfortable symptoms, stops excessive tissue waste in convalescence from fever; for the run-down, anemic, thin-blooded people, the "Discovery" is refreshing and vitalizing.

In liquid or tablet form at most drug stores or send 50 one-cent stamps for trial box to Dr. Pierce's Invalids' Hotel, Buffalo, N. Y.

Read Chapter VII on Circulatory Organs in the "Medical Adviser"—A French cloth-bound book of 1008 pages sent on receipt of 31 one-cent stamps, address as above.

FROM THE BIG STORE

A Merry Christmas

May Christmas pack your stocking from toe to top with those gifts you most desire.

May the day be as bright to your eyes as the berries on the holly wreaths.

May the remembrances of this Christmas be to you like the Christmas tree—ever green.

May your heart beat time to the tune of the Christmas bells so that whether you be twenty or seventy, or any way between, you may once more feel the joy of that first Christmas morning when you crept down the stairs in the dim light of dawn to see what Santa had brought.

And may you feel the sincerity of these wishes, the earnestness of this handclasp as we say, "A Merry, Joyous Christmas and thanks for making this the best of Christmases for us.

WOMAN'S PAGE

The Evening Chit-Chat

BY RUTH CAMERON

IN HONOR OF CHRISTMAS.

ON THE day after Christmas last year I met a dear old friend of mine who is the proud and adoring grandmother of six fine grandchildren. I mention that fact about her because it describes her so completely. For her vocation, her avocation, in short her whole life now, she has spent every spare moment—and many she could ill spare from sleep and rest, for she is a devotee in the person—in making Christmas gifts for her daughter and these wonderful children.

She is not well off in this world's goods and her gifts also represented many painful bits of self-denial. And yet I should not call them painful for all her labor and denial was sweetened and blessed by the love and by her anticipation of the children's pleasure in her gifts.

Two or three days before Christmas I saw her light in her sewing room burning long after eleven o'clock. When I asked her the next day what kept her up so late she explained that she was finishing Ruth's Christmas presents. She was a wonderful creature in the latest Parisian style with a beautiful evening gown and a complete set of the most elaborate lingerie. She showed it to me as it lay in state in its tissue nest, ready to be sent, with a touching delight. "I can hardly wait to hear what Ruth says when she sees that on the tree," she said. Her eyes shone and her delicate old face was beautifully lit up with her tender anticipation of another's delight.

So it happened that my first question the day after Christmas was, "And what did Ruth say when she saw her doll?"

A shadow crossed my dear old friend's face through the tired lines into pathetic prominence. "I wasn't there," she answered. "They had the tree before I got there. The children were so impatient and Gertrude wanted to get things cleared up so they could get ready for the dinner party. You know we couldn't get there before eleven. I was disappointed but of course it was all right. Gertrude telephoned to ask me if I minded and I understood perfectly how it was."

All the courage with which the brave little grandmother bore her disappointment could not hide its keenness. All the forgiving love with which she defended her daughter could not quite cover the hurt. And as I listened to her I could have sworn that she had done any good. Gertrude married well. She has plenty of money at her command. She gives her mother handsome presents. That year she gave her an expensive set of china. A beautiful present, was it not? But in the eyes of the Lord of Christmas how much do you think it counted against that thoroughly selfish deed?

Tomorrow is Christmas. It is the one day of all the year when everyone ought to be happy. Suppose you and I do our part in making our housemates so, not only by gifts but by unusual tenderness and thoughtfulness. Suppose we celebrate by making an extra effort not to speak one hasty word or do one thoughtless, tactless thing on Christmas day.

All Christmas presents, someone has said, "are impertinently by the anxiety and rush of antecedent preparation, and it is high tribute to the influence of the day that so many are able to survive it without losing digestion and temper as a result of over-training."

Here's hoping that you and I may be among the many who pay that worthy tribute to the Lord of Christmas.

in which it was baked, accompanied by thick cream.

Free five ounces of suet from fiber and skin, have it very cold and chop finely with half a pound of flour and half a teaspoonful of salt. Mix well and add sufficient ice water to make a paste that can be handled. Roll it out on the floured pasteboard to about one inch in thickness, spread over it a pint of any preferred fruit jam, roll it up and the securely in a well floured cloth, leaving plenty of room for it to swell. Put the pudding into a pot of actively boiling water for two hours; or it may be steamed for two hours and a half. Serve with stirred hand sauce.

Put Charlotte. This dessert may be prepared in about ten minutes. Half a pint of double cream, thoroughly chilled; add two tablespoonfuls of cold, rich milk, and with a Dover egg beater whip the cream until it will stand alone. Then very gradually add a small cup of Maraschino cordial, sugar to taste; one tablespoonful of chopped cherries and a small cupful of chopped nut meats. Turn into a glass bowl that has been lined with lady fingers and set directly on the ice for half an hour before serving.

The Kitchen Cabinet

O JUDGE with candor the feeble to support against the strong. To soothe the wretched and the poor to feed. Will cover many an idle, foolish deed.

PALATABLE MEATS.

To prepare a roasted ham, let it soak over night, simmer two hours, then cover with flour and bake two hours. Remove the paste and skin, cover the flesh with cracker crumbs and sugar, stick cloves about the edge and brown in the oven. Serve with cider sauce and pickled walnuts.

Meat Loaf.—Take four pounds of ground meat, two eggs, half a cup of suet, salt and pepper, and a little cream to the beaten eggs, mix well with the meat, then add enough toast crumbs to mold and keep in shape. Form into a loaf and put into a hot oven. A mushroom sauce is delicious served with such a loaf.

Italian Roast.—Take a nice piece of veal, cut around the bone and put in a small piece of garlic, salt and a few allspice. Make incisions in several places, putting in the seasoning, tie a leaf of celery on top of the roast, with a small red pepper. Pour over a little olive oil and cook until tender, according to the size of the roast.

Tough Steak Made Tender.—Take a tablespoonful of olive oil, two of vinegar and a little cayenne. Lay the steak upon it and let it stand for an hour, turning occasionally. Then broil or fry as usual. The vinegar softens the fiber. If the meat is very tough let it stand over night in the oil and vinegar.

Baked Hamburg Steak.—Take two pounds of hamburger steak, half a cup of cooked cereal or bread crumbs, one onion chopped fine, a quarter of a teaspoon of allspice and cloves, an egg well beaten, salt and pepper to taste. Mix well and bake in a hot oven. Serve with tomato sauce. To one can of tomato add a bay leaf, a clove of garlic, salt and pepper, and a teaspoon of Worcestershire, a tablespoonful of cornstarch. Cook until smooth. Pour over the meat and serve.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: (1) What will clean a white chinchilla coat. (2) Would you kindly give me a recipe for thick lips. (3) I am a girl eighteen and in the second year of high school. Am I far enough advanced for my age?

DAILY READER. (1) The very best way to clean it is to send it to a professional cleaner. If you cannot do that, make a paste of flour and gasoline, rub it well into the cloth and let it remain in a closed box for 24 hours. Then take out the brush and brush the very soiled spot with gasoline. Always use gasoline outdoor and keep gasoline and coat away from fire.

(2) You cannot make the lips smaller. Give them a pleasant expression to make them more attractive. (3) You should be further advanced.

KEEPING THE EGG PLEDGE—OR—FIRST AID TO BOYCOTTERS

Eggs, baked, eggs broiled, eggs froited, eggs stuffed, eggs in a thousand and one ways and combinations stare at one from every cook book. But it requires a determined search to unearth recipes that require no eggs—especially dessert recipes. A fortune hunter to await the publisher of an "eggless cook book" in these days of high prices, boycotters and suspected corners.

Following are a few attractive desserts that the most conscientious abstainer from eggs can serve without scruples:

Sauce Pudding. Cream together one tablespoonful of butter and a scant cupful of sugar, then beat in one cupful of strained apple sauce, half a teaspoonful of ground cinnamon, half a grated nutmeg, and a dash of salt. Bake in a small dish for about thirty minutes. In a moderate oven. Serve hot with a hard sauce, flavored with sherry.

Chocolate Bavarian Cream. Cover the contents of half a box of gelatin with half a cupful of cold water and let it soak for half an hour. Grate two ounces of chocolate, add it to a pint of boiling milk with half a cupful of sugar and the gelatin, and stir until all the ingredients are dissolved. Take from the fire, flavor with a scant teaspoonful of vanilla extract, turn into a bowl and beat with a Dover egg beater until it begins to thicken. Have in readiness half a pint of whipped cream, fold this into the gelatin preparation and pour into an ornamental mould. Set on the ice to chill and harden. Serve unmoulded, accompanied by a cream sauce.

Grape Juice Water-Ice. Boil together one quart of water and a pound of sugar for five minutes. Remove from the fire, and add one pint of unfermented grape juice and the strained juice of one lemon. Taste to see if it is sweet enough and freeze in the usual manner. Serve in small crystallized cherries.

Apple Slump. Sift into a mixing bowl one quart of flour, add two heaping teaspoonfuls of baking powder and one teaspoonful of salt, and rub into the flour with the finger tips one tablespoonful of butter. Moisten to a soft dough with about half a pint of milk. Have six large fat apples, pared, quartered and cored; put them with one pint of water into a baking dish and sprinkle lightly with ground cinnamon, grated nutmeg and sugar. Roll out the dough about one inch thick, lay it over the apples, cover the baking dish and cook slowly in the oven for about forty minutes. When done dust very thick with powdered sugar and serve in the dish.

Household Hint

THINGS WORTH KNOWING.

White furs can be freshened by rubbing into them a generous amount of damp cornmeal. After letting dry, shake and brush out thoroughly.

In making fish balls of any kind, mix them while the potato is hot, if you would have them creamy and light.

Never cover fish while cooking, if you wish it to be crisp and brown over nicely.

Dark blue, gray and black may be set by soaking them in salt-water.

THE TABLE.

Scalloped Oysters.—Drain the oysters and dispose in a buttered baking dish in the following order: In the bottom have a light layer of crushed crackers, season with paprika and salt, drop bits of butter upon them and wet with oyster liquor and milk mixed in equal quantities. Now comes a layer of oysters similarly seasoned, next a layer of whipped cream, and a double allowance of butter. Cover closely and bake half an hour, then uncover and brown lightly.

Club Sandwiches.—Toast slices of bread a nice brown, and while hot spread with butter and put between the slices and lettuce leaf, some cold baked chicken cut in thin slices, a few chopped olives, and a couple of slices of hot crisp bacon. A layer of salad dressing, another lettuce leaf and the other slice of toast.

French Dressing.—Put the inside of a bowl with a clove of garlic. Measure into a bowl six tablespoonfuls of oil, two of vinegar, two saltspoonfuls of salt, and one of pepper. Mix thoroughly before pouring over the salad.

Stewed Prunes.—Wash dried prunes and soak them for at least five hours in cold water. Put them into a saucepan with enough water to cover them and simmer very gently for twenty minutes. Now add sufficient granulated sugar to sweeten liberally, and simmer until the prunes are tender. Take from the fire and set aside to cool.

Orange Omelet.—Beat the yolks of five eggs together until thick and lemon-colored. Add five tablespoonfuls of orange juice, the grated rind of one orange and five tablespoonfuls of powdered sugar. Then fold in lightly the beaten whites of four eggs. Put a little butter in an omelet pan, and when hot pour in the omelet mixture and spread in evenly. Let it cook through, but not harden. Fold the edges over and turn out upon a hot dish. Serve with a dressing of sliced oranges and powdered sugar.

Caramel Cake.—Sift together three cupfuls of pastry flour and three teaspoonfuls of baking powder. Cream one-half cupful of butter and two cupfuls of sugar. Beat the yolks of four eggs until thick and lemon-colored. Add one cupful of milk and alternately the well-beaten whites of the eggs and the flour. Then add one teaspoonful of vanilla extract and one teaspoonful of chopped walnuts. Bake in loaf and when done cover with the caramel frosting.

Caramel Frosting.—Put together over the fire three-quarters of a cupful of cream, half a cupful of sugar and a tablespoonful of butter. Cook until it spins a thread, add to it four tablespoonfuls of burnt sugar, or caramel, and a teaspoonful of vanilla. When it is cool use for the filling and frosting of the cake.

Every Day Talks for Every Day People

BY FRANCES JOYCE KENNEDY.

Two thousand years have failed to break the spirit of sympathy between the Mother at Bethlehem and the mother of today, for as Heaven lay round that infancy in the quiet starlight of a hushed night, so it lies round the cradle of every infant in the world today.

Christ is in the heart of every little child, and what we do for a child we do for Christ—as we have done unto one of the least of these my brethren, we have done it unto Me.

There is no experience to be compared with the joy of creeping down stairs in the early hours of Christmas morn to see if "He" really came, if the doll, sled or drum of your dreams is yours.

Buying and giving are not enough, for "the gift without the giver is bare." Gifts that are made and presented by loving hearts and hands are the best of all. Remember this when you greet the members of your family in the morning; do your part so they will have a happy Christmas.

If you are fortunate enough to have parents, if they be going down the hill, if they be near the end of the road; see that tomorrow is in all truth a happy day for them, it will detract none from the children's joy if the old folk are first, for in the natural order of events the kiddies have many more feasts to celebrate—maybe your parents haven't.

No holiday centered in selfishness could survive for centuries. Christmas in the finest sense is giving, not taking—the one that has been the cause of happiness to another; that one knows the real joy of the birthday of the Christchild.

Much has been accomplished toward the aiding of the ones who might have been missed in the visit of Santa tonight, still if you have not been a helper so far, it is not yet too late—make some one happy this meant to be happy season. Warm your own heart by buying a drum, sled or doll for one who might have been forgotten.

One little child made happy is an envious record ahead of you, it will blot out bitterness, meanness and unkindness from your heart and you will not be forgotten by the Infant who lay in the lonely stable centuries ago.

As one family, close together in the bonds of good fellowship may all the readers of this paper see the sun dawn on a day of glee for the children, contentment for the grownup children (that means you); a true realization of the day with the peace that passes understanding filling the hearts of us all. Merry Christmas.

Beets as Fertilizers. An explanation of the improvement of European agriculture in recent years has been sought, and in Germany it is attributed to soil stimulation from beet culture. From the books of eight scattered estates where beets have been grown for sugar, Dr. Lillendahl finds an increase in the yield of wheat of 6.95 bushels per acre, rye, 1.54; barley, 6.51, and oats, 6.77. Cattle have increased, and the net income has been raised by as high as 70 per cent.

ECZEMA 25 YEARS FACE A MASS OF IT

Says "Resinol Cured Me of One of the Worst Cases Anybody Ever Saw."

Philadelphia, Pa., Sept. 20, 1912.—"I had eczema for the last twenty-five years, and have been afflicted so badly that for weeks I could not go outside the door. My face was one mass of pimples, and not only the looks of it but the itching and burning pains I experienced were just dreadful. I lost a great deal of sleep and had to keep clamped cloths on my face all night to relieve the pain. I had become disgusted with trying different things.

"One day I made up my mind to try Resinol, and after using one jar of Resinol Ointment, and one cake of Resinol Soap, I saw the difference, and now my face is as clear as anybody's, and I certainly don't need to be ashamed to go out. Resinol Soap and Resinol Ointment cured me of one of the worst cases of eczema, I guess, that anybody ever saw." (Signed) Mrs. C. Hellmuth, 5811 Appleton Street.

Try Resinol yourself and see how quickly the itching stops and stubborn eruptions disappear. Resinol Ointment and Soap are sold by all druggists. For free trial, write to Dept. 19-M, Resinol, Baltimore, Md.

The Evidence Is Supplied by Local Testimony.

If the reader wants stronger proof than the following statement and experience of a resident of Janesville, what can it be?

C. W. Allen, retired farmer, 468 N. Chatham St., Janesville, Wis., says: "I suffered from rheumatic pains in my back when I bent over. My muscles and joints were twisted out of shape. My feet were swollen and the flesh under my eyes was all puffed up. I couldn't sleep. My kidneys acted too freely and the kidney secretions were scanty. The passages were accompanied by a burning pain. I had to be awful careful or I would catch cold. I felt miserable. I spent hundreds of dollars for doctors' treatments, but I kept growing worse. One day the doctor told me I would be dead in three months. Then I got Doan's Kidney Pills from the People's Drug Co., and they completely and permanently cured me. My kidneys have been in good shape since. The swellings have all left me and the rheumatism is all gone. I am hale and hearty even if I am seventy-seven years old. Six years ago Doan's Kidney Pills cured me and after three doctors said I would die, I did all the heavy work on my farm without a bit of trouble.

WITHIN THE LAW

By MARVIN DANA
FROM THE PLAY OF
BAYARD VEILLER

Copyright, 1913, by the H. K. Fly company.

"I can't!" she cried again, panting as if in exhaustion.
"Why can't you?"
"Because—because—" The girl could not go on.
"What were you sent up for?"
"For stealing."
"Stealing what?"
"Goods."
"Where from?"
"The Emporium."

In a flash of intuition the whole truth was revealed to the woman who

"You cried and lied, and they let you off with a year."

stood looking down at the cowering creature before her.

"The Emporium!" she repeated. There was a tragedy in the single word. "Then you are the one who!"

The accusation was cut short by the girl's shriek.

"I am not! I am not. I tell you!" For a moment Mary lost her poise. Her voice rose in a flare of rage.

"You are! You are!"

The craven spirit of the girl could struggle no more. She could only sit in a huddled, shaking heap of dread.

Mary soon mastered her to such an extent that when she spoke again, as if in self communion, her words came quietly, yet with overtones of a supreme woe.

"She did it!" Then after a little she addressed the girl with a certain wondering before this mystery of horror.

"Why did you throw the blame on me?"

The girl made several efforts before her mumbling became intelligible, and then her speech was gasping, broken with fear.

"I found out they were watching me, and I was afraid they would catch me. So I took them and ran into the cloak room and put them in a locker that wasn't close to mine and some in the pocket of a coat that was hanging there. God knows I didn't know whose it was. I just put them there—I was frightened!"

"But they caught you later. Why didn't you tell them?"

"I was afraid," came the answer from the shuddering girl. "I told them it was the first time I had taken anything, and they let me off with a year."

"You cried and lied, and they let you off with a year. I wouldn't cry. I told the truth—and—" Mary's voice broke in a tearful sob. The color had gone out of her face, and she stood rigid, looking down at the girl whose crime had ruined her life with an expression of infinite loathing in her eyes.

Aggie took advantage of the pause. Her voice was acid. "Some people are sneaks—just sneaks!"

Somebody thinks—to the girl, gave her a touch of courage sufficient for cowardly protestations. It was more like the abuse that was familiar to her. A gush of tears came.

"I'll never forgive myself, never," she moaned.

"Oh, yes, you will," Mary said malevolently. "People forgive themselves pretty easily. Stop crying. Nobody is going to hurt you." She thrust the money again toward the girl and crowded it into the half reluctant, half greedy hand. "Take it, and get out."

The contempt in her voice rang still sharper. "Go, before I change my mind!"

The girl needed no second bidding. With the money still clutched in her hand she went forth swiftly, stumbling a little in her haste, fearful lest at the last moment the woman she had so wronged should change in mood and take back the money.

Freed from the miasma of that presence, Mary remained motionless for a long minute, then sighed from her tortured heart.

"A girl I didn't know," she said bewilderedly, "perhaps had never spoken to—who smashed my life like that! Oh, if it wasn't so awful it would be funny! It would be funny!"

CHAPTER IX.

A Bridegroom Spurned.

"YOU know—Aggie told you—that Cassidy was up here from headquarters. He didn't put a name to it, but I'm on."

It was Garson speaking. Mary regarded him inquiringly, and he continued, putting the fact with a certain brutal bluntness after the habit of his class.

"I guess you'll have to quit seeing young Gilder. The bulls are wise. His father has made a boller."

"Don't let that worry you, Joe," she said tranquilly. She allowed a few seconds to go by, then added as if quite indifferent, "I was married to Dick Gilder this morning." There came a squeal of amazement from Aggie, a start of incredulity from Garson.

"Yes," Mary repeated evenly. "I was married to him this morning. That was my important engagement," she added with a smile toward Aggie.

Aggie sat erect, her baby face alive with worldly glee.

"Oh, gee, what luck!" she exclaimed noisily. "Why, he's a king fish, he is. Gee, but I'm glad you landed him!"

"Thank you," Mary said with a smile that was the result of her sense of humor rather than from any tenderness.

It was then that Garson spoke. He put a question of vital significance.

"Do you love him?"

The question caught Mary all unprepared, but she retained her self control sufficiently to make her answer in a voice that to the ordinary ear would have revealed no least tremor.

"No," she said. She offered no explanation, no excuse; merely stated the fact in all its finality.

"Then you won't leave us?" Garson asked. "We're going on as we were before?" The hint of defection in his manner had vanished. "And you won't live with him?"

"Live with him?" Mary exclaimed emphatically. "Certainly not!"

Garson was still patient in his determination to apprehend just what had come to pass.

"Does he understand the arrangement?" was his question.

"No, not yet," Mary admitted, without sign of embarrassment.

Garson was intently considering another phase of the situation, one suggested perhaps out of his own deeper sentiments.

"He must think a lot of you," he said gravely. "Don't he?"

"I suppose so."

Garson spoke very softly, but with an intensity that left no doubt as to the honesty of his purpose.

"I'd throw up the whole game and go to him, if you really care."

There fell a tense silence. It was broken by Mary.

"I married him to get even with his father," she said. "That's all there is to it. By the way, I expect Dick will be here in a minute or two. When he comes just remember not to enlighten him."

"Mr. Gilder," Fannie announced.

"Any one with him?"

"No, Miss Turner," the maid answered.

"Have him come in," Mary ordered.

Garson made hasty excuses and went out on the heels of the maid. Aggie, however, consulting only her own wishes in the matter, had no thought of flight, and, if the truth be told, Mary was glad of the sustaining presence of another woman. She got up slowly and stood still, while Aggie regarded her curiously. A moment later the bridegroom entered. He was still clean cut and wholesome. Some sons of wealthy fathers are not after four years' experience of the white lights of town. And the lines of his face were firmer, better in every way. It seemed, indeed, that here was some one of a resolute character, not to be wasted on the trivial and gross things. He caught Mary in his arms with "Hello, dear!" smothered in the kiss he implanted on her lips.

Mary strove vainly to free herself. "Don't, oh, don't!" she gasped.

Dick released his wife and smiled the beatific smile of the newly wed.

"Why not?" he demanded, with a smile.

"Agnes!" It was the sole pretext to which Mary could turn for a momentary relief.

The bridegroom faced about and perceived Agnes. He made a formal bow and spoke quietly.

"I beg your pardon, Miss Lynch, but—" a smile of perfect happiness shone on his face—"you could hardly with which General Hastings was to be compensated, along with the return of his letters, for his payment of $10,000 to Miss Agnes Lynch.

Mary spoke crisply to Agnes. "And now you must get ready. You are to be at Harris' office with this document at 4 o'clock, and remember that you are to let the lawyer manage everything."

"I don't see the use of all this monkey business," she protested. "All I want is the coin."

"Listen, Agnes. The last time you tried to make a man give up part of his money it resulted in your going to prison for two years."

"But that was so exciting."

"And this way is so safe," Mary rejoined sharply. "Besides, my dear, you would not get the money. My way will. Your way was blackmail. Mine is not. Understand?"

"Oh, sure!" Aggie replied grimly, on her way to the door.

"Mr. Griggs," Fannie announced. There was a smile on the face of the maid, which was explained a minute later, when the visitor was shown into the drawing room, for his presence was of an elegance so extraordinary as to attract attention anywhere—and mirth as well from timid observers.

Meantime Garson had explained to Mary.

"It's English Eddie. You met him once. I wonder what he wants? Probably got a trick for me. We often used to work together."

"Nothing without my consent," Mary warned.

"Oh, no, no, sure not!" Garson agreed.

Dinner Stories

A moving picture actor who delights in the smile of the maids who just "simply love an actor" was telling a willing listener, a sweet young thing of about twenty summers, all about his adventures on a recent trip to Mexico, when the company went there to take a series of special pictures. Among other things he mentioned the heat.

"Oh, my, but it was hot!" was the way the charmer expressed it. "You would hardly believe it, but it was just suffocating—one hundred and ten in the shade."

Dejectedly twirling his thumbs the clerk sat in the box office of the Frivolity theater. A depressing air of failure hung over the theater, and it looked as though the piece would have to be withdrawn very shortly.

Suddenly he perked up as a countenanced man and his wife came in, followed by their three daughters and two sons.

"Have you got seven seats in the middle of the second row for tonight?" asked paternally.

The box office man made a pretense of examining the plan of seats.

"Yes, I find they are vacant, sir," said he, trying to repress his excitement. "Shall I book them for you, sir?"

"Er—no, I think not," said the man from the country. "If you've got those seats on your hands it seems to me the play can't be up to much! Good morning!"

Severely Simple Court Livery.

Probably the simplest court livery in the world is that worn in the royal palace of Korea. The emperor's servants are all dressed in garments and headgear of red calico.

The right hand doubtless owes something of its pre-eminence to the Bible. The Hebrews singled it out for special honor, and the Scriptures contain quite a hundred references in which "the right hand" is made the type and symbol of everything noble, praiseworthy and desirable. It is worth noting, however, that the tribe of Benjamin once boasted 700 left-handed slingers who "could sling stones to a hair's breadth and not miss," and that among the "mighty men and heroes" of King David were many who "could use both the right hand and the left in hurling stones and shooting arrows with the bow."

When they first come, the best time to break them up. One standard remedy—Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. Sold for 70 years.

A Season of Religious Devotion—"Open House" for Friends and Relatives—Elaborate Banquets and the Peculiar But Delicious Things They Have To Eat.

CO the high-class native Filipino, Christmas is both a solemn and a festive occasion. Indeed, it may be said with much truth that he takes his Christmas a deal more seriously than does the average American who, perhaps, is overburdened and hardened by the insufferable task of giving and receiving gifts that he wishes were at the end of the rainbow. And, likewise, he enjoys the pleasures of the season more wholeheartedly.

The Filipino—not the wild tribes, mind you, but the real native Filipino, who is extremely cultured, educated and a devout follower of the Christ Child—is remarkably simple and sincere in his observance of the greatest holiday of the Christian year.

To talk with Manuel L. Quezon, one of the Resident Commissioners in Congress from the Philippines, or with his energetic secretary, Maximo M. Kalaw, and hear them tell of the elaborate, jolly, yet deeply religious Christmas customs in "the Islands" is to gain a new viewpoint of the Yuletide and its meaning and, perhaps, to envy them not a little.

First the Fast, Then the Feast.

Christmas is the great gala day of the Filipino. And, for that matter, so are the two weeks preceding the day itself. But up until the dawn of Christmas morning solemnity is the watchword and a devout observance of the religious significance of the occasion is markedly apparent. Then the fun and frolic break loose and smiles and laughter and the murmur of dulcet musical instruments are in order. Before Christmas Day it is a fast; afterwards it's a feast.

For two weeks before Christmas, even the children attend mass every morning at four o'clock. And during the entire twenty-four hours of Christmas Eve, everyone fasts most rigorously. Then, with the stroke of midnight, comes the great mass in the cathedral.

As the Christmas bells peal forth the glad tidings, the houses become alive with lights, the children are awakened from their dreams, and the people rally forth to attend the mass. The air is chilly though not actually cold, of course. The streets are crowded with worshippers on their way to the churches.

When the Fun Begins.

The churches are handsomely decorated with leaves, flowers and the boughs of palms and other tropical trees, and on each altar is a miniature representation of the birth of the Christ Child in the lowly manger at Bethlehem. It is quite similar to the far-famed cradle and "Bambino" of the Central American countries.

People from the outlying towns have come in to the service, resplendent in their new nainmet and with merry Christmas greetings upon their lips. "Felices Pascuas" is the word of the greeting, and it may be heard on every side.

The mass over, the real fun begins. The children make happy pilgrimages to the homes of relatives and friends, attired in their best "bibs and tuckers" and very proud of them. They are the recipients of many gifts in the houses they visit; and then, too, come the many parties, the family reunions and continuous festivals of the entire week following Christmas Day.

Indeed, Christmas is a most joyful occasion for Filipino children. Aside from their little pilgrimages after the early mass—from which they return home with pockets filled with presents or thinking with money—they have many joyous affairs. They look forward to the coming of Christmas with the same longing and anxiety as does the American child.

Strange to say, however, they do not believe in our Santa Claus. Nor do they hang up their stockings by the chimney place. Nor do they have Christmas trees. But, you may be sure, they have good reasons for rejoicing at the coming of Christmas.

For days and days before the great festival, Filipino mothers are anxiously preparing to make the occasion memorable for their children. They sew diligently on pretty dresses for them, buying the most expensive material they can possibly afford.

A Day for the Children.

"Christmas is indeed a day of rejoicing for the children," said a well-known Filipino the other day, with just a suggestion of a tear in his eye as he thought of the happy times he would be unable to enjoy there this year. "As the Yuletide approaches, their young faces fairly beam with joy and anticipation. They watch the making of their finery with eager eye and try it on with all the enthusiasm and preening of a woman before the mirror of a fashionable dressmaker. Ah, how proud they are of the tiny shoes they have been bought for them! And how eager they are to discover what presents they will receive from their relatives and friends!

"And yet the giving and receiving of presents is really but a minor part of the Christmas celebration—with both the children and the grown-ups. We have not yet made it the burden. It seems to have become in the States."

"Peace and goodwill are the predominating spirit of the Filipino Christmas," said Mr. Kalaw, Secretary to the Commissioner, or "delegate" to Congress, the other day in his offices in the House of Representatives office building. "This is mainly expressed, not through the giving of Christmas presents, as seems to be the custom in America—though a considerable number of gifts are exchanged—but through the actual warming of one's heart toward his friends and relatives. Members of a family, rich or poor, living near each other or far distant, meet for their Christmas celebration and, whenever too great distance does not forbid, exchange visits."

Within the Family Circle.

"Indeed, family gatherings are the accepted order of the day. When one sees these informal family reunions; where love and affection are the predominating spirit; when he finds in the typical Filipino homes these happy circles of friends and relatives—he cannot help but be impressed by the beauty and strength of the ties which bind the Filipinos to their homes, their relatives and their friends.

"At such a gathering, the old folks sit together, their wrinkled faces beaming with joy, and rehearse with fond recollections their former Christmas masses together, or look forward to the future which awaits their children. The younger people, happy and jubilant, gather round the piano and sing their favorite kundimans, or love songs. Or, most likely they sit them to the accompaniment of their sweet-toned string instruments.

"These love songs are plaintive indeed and very popular in the Philippines. The children, forming their own groups, compare the gifts they have received and enjoy that innocent bliss which Christmas always gives to childhood."

On Christmas Day the festivities are varied. Aside from the family reunions, parties and banquets, there are baseball games which are hotly contested. Indeed, baseball seems to have taken "the Islands" by storm, and no Christmas day is now complete without its one or more championship contests.

In Manila a procession of masked revellers is held through the principal streets. Donning grotesque costumes and masks, they march to the tune of musical instruments of all kinds. Confetti is thrown and the fun is almost as fast and furious as that of our own Mardi Gras at New Orleans.

No Turkey For Dinner.

Bands are not needed to head the procession for, so musical are the Filipinos, that nearly every one in line of march carries a musical instrument of some sort. The procession excites the utmost interest each year, and you may be sure, the little Filipino boy is to be found tagging along at the head, just as his American brother does when a parade comes down the street.

The Philippine Christmas dinner never includes turkey, unless it be the canned, boneless variety imported from the United States. Chicken is the national domestic bird of "the Islands" and it always has the place of honor on the festive menu. In fact, many of the most appetizing of the native dishes contain chicken as their chief ingredient.

One dish, which is to the Filipino what turkey is to the American at Christmas or Thanksgiving, is called tinola. This consists of chicken and a peculiar native vegetable called apo. This is somewhat like a pumpkin in shape, only green. The filling, or inside, is scooped out and mixed with peppers, spices and chicken. The whole is boiled and served very hot.

Suman a Favorite.

The devout Filipinos fast all of Christmas Eve, up until midnight. Then a most elaborate supper is served in the hospitable homes. At this meal, it is considered essential to serve suman, or rice cakes. But these cakes are not made of the dry, almost tasteless rice to which we are accustomed in this country.

Suman is of a sticky, sweet nature and is flavored with the juice of a coconut. The natives prefer it to bread at these feasts. It must be prepared most carefully to be tempting. After being securely wrapped in palm or banana leaves, it is put into an iron pot on the evening before Christmas Eve and allowed to boil all night.

At the Christmas dinner, pastries form the principal dessert. Among the most popular may be mentioned tarts made of guava jelly, preserved mangoes, and fresh or canned chico, which somewhat resembles a pear in appearance, being brownish yellow in color and oval in shape. As is true of nearly all Philippine fruits, it is said to have a much more delicious flavor than its kindred fruit of the temperate zone.

Famous Streets

By GEORGE FITCH, Author of "At Good Old Slivash."

BROADWAY, the heart of New York, and the lungs of the theater business, is the best advertised street in the world. It is called Broadway, because it has a relation whatever to the straight and narrow path.

Broadway was originally a crooked and uncertain trail made by the Indians while returning from New Amsterdam with their week's supply of firewater. It is still crooked in spots, but there is nothing uncertain about it. As New York has grown, it has been extended to take care of the Rusin of business, until it is now twenty miles long and two stories deep most of the way. It begins at the Battery, where the immigrants land, and where every language except English is spoken fluently. A mile north, it becomes the lair of the multi-millionaire, and another mile north, its stores sell everything from tango costumes to pet alligators. Farther north, it leaps to a height of 800 feet, and then sinks to a desert of one-story shops with a 27-story hotel among them. It then suffers from a convulsion of theatres, recovers only to be captured by the automobile business, and still farther north runs majestically for miles between tall, beeding cliffs of apartment houses.

Easy to Get Bag of Lions.

What to do when confronted with a lion is not a problem that would have puzzled the editor of one of the earliest newspapers published in South Africa. Asked by some inexperienced (or imaginary) correspondent for information about "the best way to get a good bag of lions in the Kalahari desert," he crisply replied in an editorial note: "The Kalahari desert is principally composed of sand and lions. First you sift out all the sand with a big sieve. Then the lions will remain. These you place in a bag which is carried for the purpose."

ment houses. Fifteen miles from its source, it becomes the principal thoroughfare of Yonkers, being the only street to do duty for two large cities. It then rambles over the hills of the Hudson, between the estates of the impossibly rich, and when last seen, is headed for Albany under a thick cloud of dust and automobile smoke.

Broadway contains the largest hotel in the world, for this year only, and its tallest building. The largest apartment house, the thinnest skyscraper, the most terrific restaurant and the most interesting church are all upon Broadway. It assays more millionaires, actors, automobile salesmen and gamblers than any other thoroughfare. It goes to bed at eight p. m. at its lower end and awakens for the evening at the same hour, at 42nd street. It has more hotels, theatres, electric signs and defunct little parks than any other street. There is standing room only in its sidewalks and twice as many people travel underneath it.

Broadway is America in one reel. The immigrant lands at its lower end, pack on his back, sells sandwiches for the first mile, goes into business in the second mile, sees the city government in the next mile, and proceeds dizzily from the business section through the restaurant area and the automobile dispensaries to the apartment house wilderness, and thence to a country estate on the Hudson at the far upper end.

Broadway is a twenty mile leap from poverty to riches, with plenty of falling off places by the way. It will be longer some day, but never much more terrific.
